Norco IMC invites you to take a look back to 1995 when Norco College was patrolled by Officer Chad Price and his partner, "Captain," a 1,000 pound quarter horse.

Located in Norco's "Horsetown USA," it seemed fitting at the time to have a horse patrol at Norco College. The campus had parts still undeveloped.

"The horse is perfect because we have a lot of territory to cover" Price said. "You can get anywhere you need to in a hurry."

Captain served as more than just an on-campus icon. Officer Price called him, "a 1,000 pound cop," and found that students were more open to greeting Price if he was with Captain.

"The horse opens the door for them to approach me on a different level than just as a law enforcement officer," Price said.

Officer Price owned Captain for three years before he became part of campus security.
