

DECEMBER 2013

Norco IMC invites you to take a look back to December 10, 2002 at Norco College's dedication of the sculpture by Esmoreit Koetsier titled "Injection."

Esmoreit Koetsier, a Dutch born design engineer with a passion for art, was a student at RCCD in the late 1990s. While attending, he participated in the Study Abroad Program and spent a semester in Florence, Italy. The experience deepened his desire to create artwork and he focused more on sculpture upon his return. He graduated in 1999 and was honored as a Student of Distinction for Engineering Technology.

Dr. Brenda Davis, Provost, welcomed attendees to the dedication of Norco College's first sculpture. Karen Skiba, Associate Professor of Art, spoke about "Why Art?" Koetsier explained his use of aluminum and stainless steel to create sculptures that range from abstract to industrial. The piece was a reflection of his view to "create from the heart and soul for others to admire."
