

Program Review - Overall Report

2024 - 2027

Instructional: English

2024 - 2027

Overall Trends

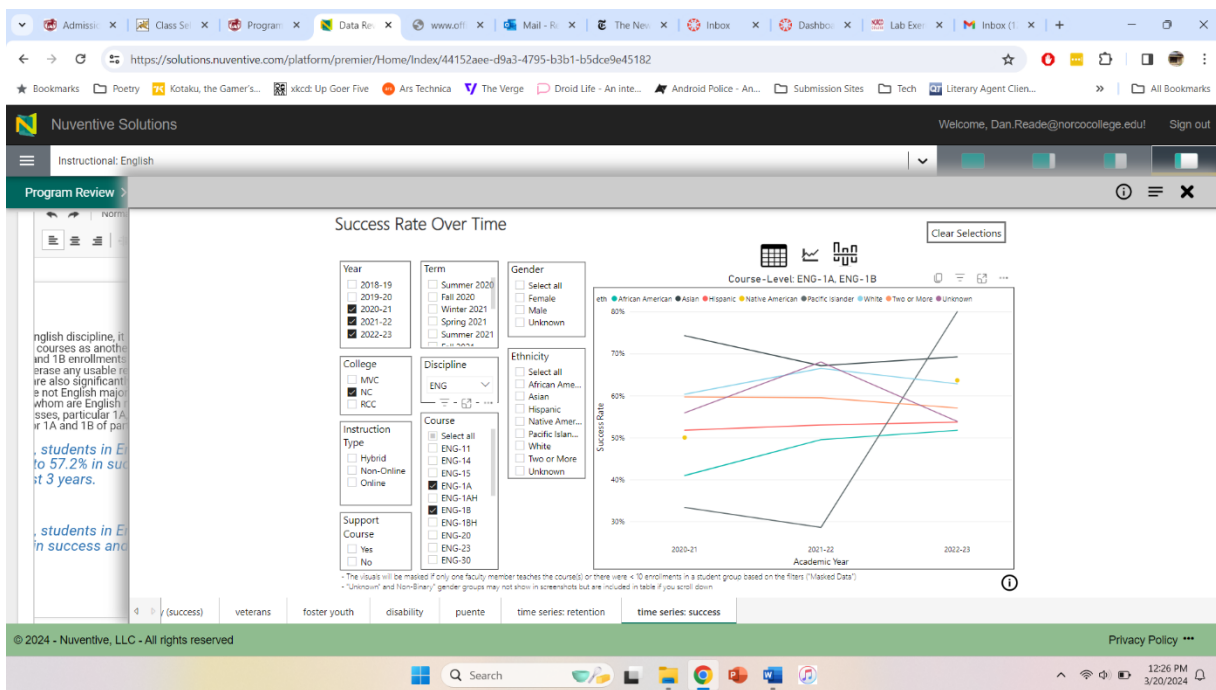

What overall trends do you see in success, retention, program of study, educational planning, and awards over the past 3 or more years?

For the English discipline, it is valuable to evaluate the data related to success and retention in two sets: ENG-1A and -1B as one set, and then literature courses as another set. These sets are different for a number of reasons. The first is simply size: ENG-1A and -1B enrollments effectively dwarf the enrollments of all literature classes combined, so putting together all ENG courses would in effect erase any usable results related to the literature courses. The students in and the purposes of the classes are also significantly different. ENG-1A and -1B are taken by the vast majority of students, many of whom are not English majors. In contrast, Literature courses are taken by a smaller subset of students, many of whom are English majors. It is also important to examine the ENG-1A and -1B data on its own as these classes, particular 1A, are required for many students for transfer and degree advancement, making results for 1A and 1B of particular note not only for the discipline but for the college as a whole.

Overall, students in ENG-1A and -1B courses have been about the same from 55.3% to 57.2% in success and increasing from 79.2% to 83.8% in retention over the past 3 years.

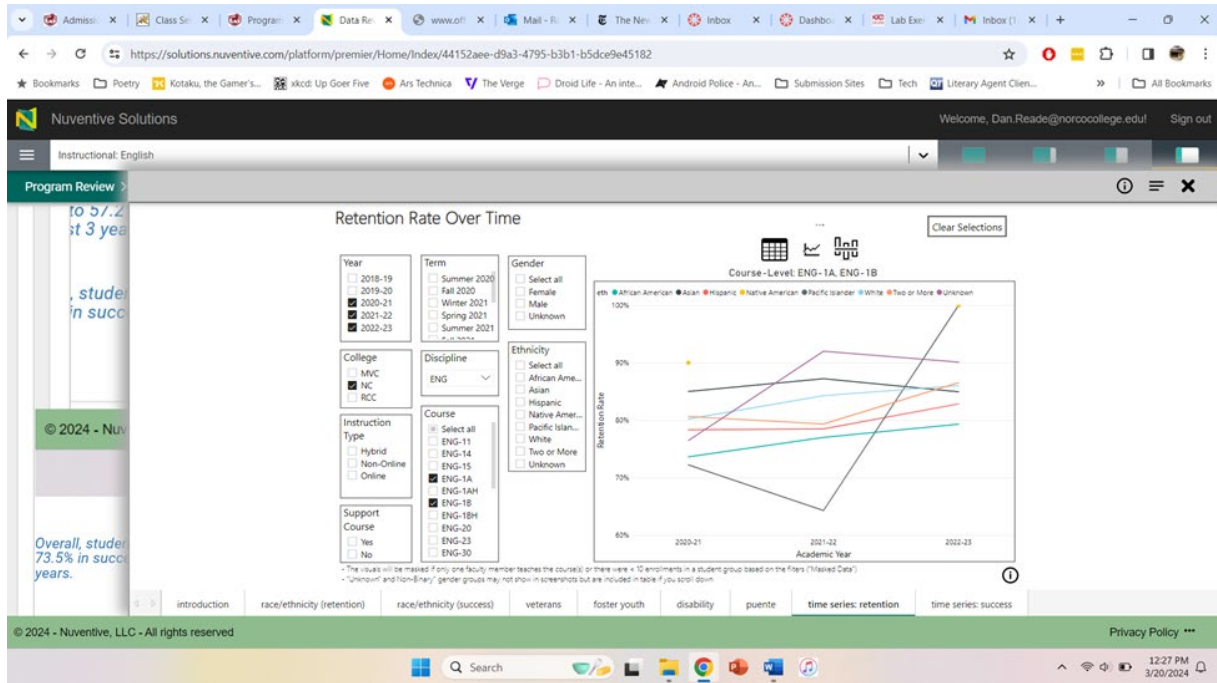

The students in ENG-1A and -1B courses have stayed about the same in their rate of receiving less than passing (DF) grades during this time.

ENG-1A/1B Retention Rates Over the last three years

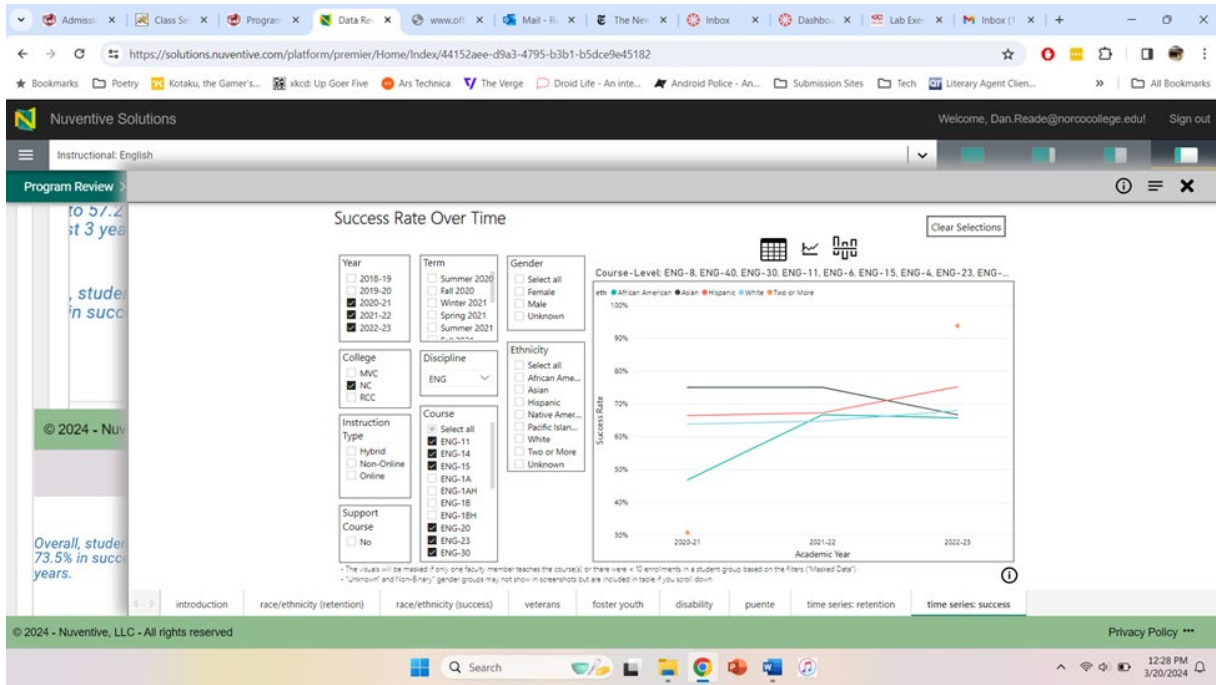

Overall, students in English Literature courses have been increasing from 60.9% to 73.5% in success and increasing from 82.3% to 86.9% in retention over the past 3 years.

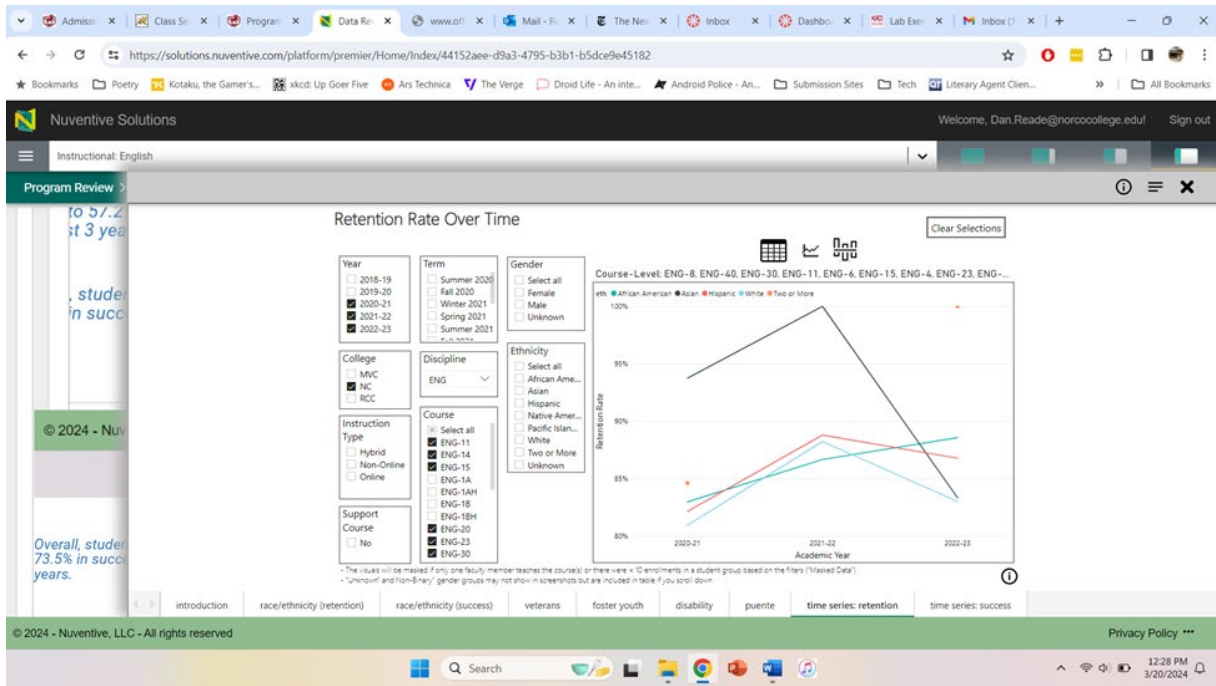

The students in Literature courses have stayed about the same in their rate of receiving less than passing (DF) grades during this time.

Literature Course Success Rates over the last three years

Data Review

Literature Course Retention Rates over the last three years

The number of students who have declared a major in English went from 285 to 225 in four years. This represents decreased growth for this program. Of these students, 23% have met with a counselor and developed an educational plan.

The number of students who have completed a degree or certificate in English program went from 9 to 12 in 4 years, with a high of 22 students earning degrees in AY19-20. This represents flat growth for this program. In the most recent year, 12 students graduated. The expected number of students who should get a degree would be approximately 44 (20% of Program of Study number in most recent year). The gap in the pipeline is approximately 32 more students to graduate with a degree or certificate.

Please add any relevant documents here.

Disaggregated Student Subgroups

Look at the disaggregated student subgroups in success, retention, program of study, educational planning, and awards for your area. Are there any equity gaps that you will address in the next 3 years?

In terms of student subgroups in ENG-1A and -1B courses, Hispanic males and females and African American males are showing gaps in success that are concerning. In terms of retention rates, the most recent complete year (2022-23) shows no disadvantages groups. However, looking over the entire year period, Hispanic males and females are showing gaps in retention that are concerning.

In terms of student subgroups in Literature courses, African American females are showing gaps in success that are concerning. Hispanic females are showing gaps in retention that are concerning.

For declared program of study, no clear racial or ethnic gaps are obvious. There is a significant gender difference, with female students making up 155 of the 225 total students with English as their declared program of study as of AY 2022-23. Whether this gender gap is a point of concern is not clear: it is not abnormal, as all four years shown in the dataset contain a similar gap.

In terms of comprehensive ed plans filed and in degrees award, the numbers present (27 for ed plans filed as of AY 2022-23; 12 students awarded degrees in AY 2022-23) are too small to draw meaningful conclusions.

If there are any concerning trends over the past 3 or more years, or if equity gaps exist, what is your action plan to address them?

In terms of ENG-1A and -1B, there remain significant success gaps for Hispanic males and females and African American males. As a discipline, English takes these gaps seriously. Efforts to address these gaps include a continual emphasis on equity-focused pedagogy; English continues to make clear the value of equity-focused pedagogy in discipline discussions and, where appropriate and contractually allowed, within both full-time and part-time faculty roles. English also has launched professional development in these areas: a prime example included a currently ongoing Community of Practice focused on ENG-91, our co-req ENG-1A support course. Effectively improving success rates in ENG-1A/91 courses should lead to an improvement in success rates for many students, including those who are members of the impacted groups. Finally, English needs to continue to provide professional development opportunities for associate faculty, who teach a significant percentage of our 1A and 1B classes.

In terms of literature courses, there are fewer groups impacted. That said, as mentioned above, the English discipline remains committed to equity-focused pedagogy to further close these gaps.

Success Rates

Program/Unit Goal

Improve success rates for ENG 1A

Goal Cycle

2024 - 2027

What are you doing now in support of this goal?

Success rates for ENG-1A have averaged around 50% over the last three years (2019-20 50.2% ; 2020-21 50.7%; 2021-22 49.7%; modality has little impact, with online classes doing a few percentage points worse than F2F/hybrid). While retention rates are generally strong (around 80% over the three years reviewed), the gap in getting students across the line is significant and needs to be addressed.

Of some note: this trend in low ENG-1A success rates is not limited to Norco; RCC has shown similar rates over the same time frame. However, MVC has averaged around 10% better success rates, indicating that there is absolutely significant room for improvement.

One area in which English is working to address this issue is through continual examination of ENG-91, our ENG-1A corequisite support course. During the 2023-24 year, as part of AB 1705, Prof. Lisa Hernandez has coordinated efforts to examine and improve the use of ENG-91, including leading a Community of Practice focused on this issue in Spring 2024. Additionally, the discipline at a district level has begun reviewing different options to provide support for students struggling in ENG-1A, including different forms of support courses (RCC) and the creation of a high-intensity, high-intervention accelerated ENG-1A offered in the second part of a semester for students who joined a traditional 16-week ENG-1A at the start of the semester but struggled (MVC); in effect, this is meant as a second-chance option to help students still completed ENG-1A in one semester.

What are your plans (3-year) regarding this goal?

The discipline plans to continue exploring avenues to effectively support students enrolled in ENG-1A. This includes improving or potentially even entirely revamping our support courses. The discipline also believes that the Writing and Reading Center represents a valuable resource for students and is hoping to continue to expand and strengthen options in these areas.

To help better support success in online sections of ENG-1A (a modality that has seen a tremendous surge in popularity since COVID), the discipline is requesting funding for a special project to create templates for ENG-1A and -1B online courses, templates that follow best practices in terms of online education and universal design and which would be freely available to all English faculty to adopt. Ideally, these templates would be created in a manner that allows faculty to mix-and-match to suit their particular pedagogical focuses. The templates would also make use of ZTC materials so that full usage of the templates would allow faculty to easily offer ZTC courses. Finally, the templates would be constructed in six-, eight-, and 16- week versions to fit the primary course lengths we offer.

The discipline also hopes to focus on fostering discussions among faculty on discipline-specific best practices. Considering the size of the discipline in terms of faculty, particularly when considering part-time faculty numbers, it is challenging to organize professional development opportunities in which the majority of faculty can participate. That challenge aside, the discipline can organize discipline meetings and other get-togethers to review and discuss online pedagogical best practices so as to help our faculty better serve and support students.

Increased Tutor Support

Program/Unit Goal

Augment base budget for tutor salaries to support tutorial services operation

Goal Cycle

2024 - 2027

What are you doing now in support of this goal?

In conjunction with Math and the Learning Resource Center, English is requesting support for an expanded and stabilized tutoring budget. English specifically requests support as part of its efforts to further expand access and support provided through the Writing and Reading Center. At present, the ability to hire students represents a significant cap on how many students the WRC is able to support at any given time.

English is attempting to support tutor access by routinely placing faculty in the WRC so that it may remain open; the WRC is not allowed to be open without a faculty member present to supervise.

What are your plans (3-year) regarding this goal?

Ideally, with more significant and stable funding for tutoring, the English discipline will be able to expand support for students seeking writing tutoring. Such support contributes directly to the discipline's goals to improve success rates and close equity gaps.

Please add any relevant documents here.

The tutoring services budget request for 2024-25 shows the importance of support for the WRC; WRC tutoring is projected to take up approximately 25% of requested funding. Moreover, the budget request shows how current tutoring services are heavily dependent upon grant and other soft funds. A shift to more reliable funding models will enable more reliable and widespread tutor access.

Program Rewards

Program/Unit Goal

Increase the number of students who are awarded degrees in English to 40 each year.

Goal Cycle

2024 - 2027

What are you doing now in support of this goal?

Since COVID, the English discipline has struggled to renew connections with its majors. We are working to stabilize our offerings of in-person literature classes: literature classes are the primary major-specific classes we offer, and when those classes are in-person, they foster opportunities for faculty and staff to develop relationships and a sense of community.

English is also, as part of the School of Communication, Humanities, and Languages, taking part in CAP events to further build a sense of community. The hope is that by developing community, faculty may be able to better support students in completing their programs of study and earning degrees.

What are your plans (3-year) regarding this goal?

In the last three years, English has averaged 14 students being awarded degrees (2020-21 - 14 students; 2021-22 - 16 students; 2022-23 - 12 students). English would like to increase this average to 40 per year, which is around 20% of our total students who have declared English as their major.

English plans to explore various options towards achieving this goal. English, along with the other disciplines in our School, can leverage CAP events to help guide and support students in completing their program of study. As English faculty continue to work with students to rebuild the sense of community lost during COVID, English faculty can use these connections to specifically work with our majors, both to support them and to assess and address barriers that may be keeping our majors from successful completion.

1. Which equity-related professional development trainings have members of your area participated in to improve student learning, student support, and/or college support?

This question is challenging in a discipline as large as English. English has 15 full-time faculty and 25 part-time faculty, making the collection of professional development training activities challenging and, to be honest, of potentially questionable use to the Program Review Committee. Towards this last point: in preparation for this question, I have reached out to English faculty asking for a list of equity-related trainings and have received several responses. Many of those responses list 5 or more different training activities. Consequently, to provide all of those trainings would present the Program Review Committee with simply a long list, which seems of questionable benefit in evaluating the equity-related efforts of the discipline; yes, there are a lot of trainings listed, but so what? I would encourage the committee to consider alternative ways that it might evaluate a discipline's equity-related focus, particularly for larger disciplines. Alternatively, guidance on how larger disciplines might respond to this question would be appreciated.

All that said, here is a sampling of trainings completed by various English faculty over the last three years (the time period I requested in my messages):

MLA Fellowship: 2022 MLA Reading/Writing Pedagogy Summer Fellowship
 Composition Focused Equity Training for Professors at HIS (Hispanic Serving Institutions)
 Pathways to Success: Asset based Teaching Training (2023)
 OFAR: Open for Anti-Racism Training (2021)
 OER Equity + Accessible Training (2023)
 Umoja Cultural Relevant and Responsive Pedagogy Training (2021 – 2024)
 Creating Accessible Documents offered through the DRC from WordAIM
 CCC LGBTQ+ Summit
 Campus Pride Index
 ALLY workshops
 Racelighting series by J. Luke Wood and Frank Harris III (CORA)
 CCCOER Open for Antiracism (OFAR)
 Addressing Inequity in our Classrooms

2. What knowledge or skills/techniques have members in your area implemented from these trainings and what changes have you seen?

Again, with such a large discipline, pointing to the specific practices of specific faculty may not have the most probative value. Still, and in the spirit of the question, here are how a range of faculty members have utilized their professional development experiences

- Increased use of OER and ZTC materials
- Accessibility improvements in online and hybrid courses.
- Adapt strategies for commenting on student work that show authentic respect for student experiences.
- Identify and address instances of microaggressions.
- Include on syllabi ALLY logos and other indicators of a supportive classroom environment.
- Utilize texts that center around the experiences of historically underrepresented communities
- Revise taking of enrollment in first week to ensure students are addressed by their preferred names.

3. What additional equity-related professional development/trainings do you seek to better support your area?

The English discipline has always been filled with educators who deeply value equity. Our faculty are routinely leaders in equity-related efforts on campus. To continue to support this focus, the discipline will continue to center pedagogical discussions around equity. Examinations of equity will be part of IOLs for full- and part-time faculty. The discipline's professional development activities (e.g. the current ENG-91 Community of Practice) will include equity as part of their discussions.

Are all your courses current (within four years)?

No

What percentage of your courses are out of date?

More than 25%

If you have courses that are not current, are they in the curriculum process?

No

For out of date courses that are not already in progress of updating, what is your plan?

Of the 20 courses that are listed as out-of-date, six are either not offered at Norco or are courses that are planned for deletion from the district curriculum in the near future. Of the 14 remaining, four are in the process of being updated, leaving ten that are not currently in the process.

Norco is working with its sibling colleges to update and revise the CORs that are out of date. This updating has happened in waves, with more updates anticipated in the next academic year, assuming no disruption due to curriculum changes (e.g. the state-wide common course numbering system).

Do you have proposals in progress for all the DE courses you intend to file?

Yes

Do you require help to get your courses up to date?

No

There are no significant gaps in this analysis. All measured categories reflect at or above a 90% mastery level.

Course(s)

ENG

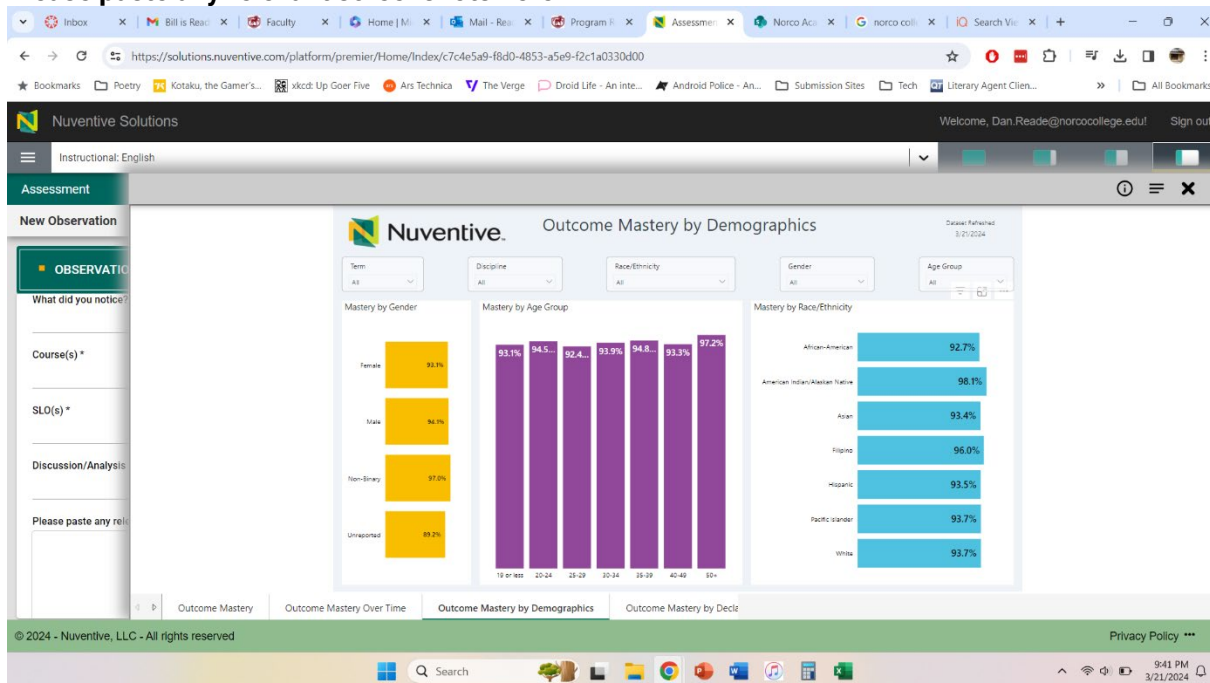

SLO(s)

This chart does not breakout data by SLO.

Discussion/Analysis

The major point that the discipline needs to discuss is as follows: why do our assessments show a greater than 90% success rate in mastery of SLOs, yet one of our largest classes by student body and section offerings, ENG-1A, shows a success rate of around 50%. Either we are not properly assessing our SLOs (likely), we are not passing students who have actually mastered the SLOs (less likely), or there is some other disconnect that would explain such a wild divergence in numbers.

Outcome Mastery by Declared Major

Date

Observation

What did you notice?

There are a few declared majors that show a mastery rate of 75% of less. Examples include Communication, Media, and Languages IGETC; Humanities, Philosophy, and Art; Kinesiology, Health & Wellness IGETC; Music Industry Studies: Audio Production CSUGE; and Political Science for Transfer CSUGE.

Course(s)

Discussion/Analysis

One thing that immediately stands out is that there is no single declared major that gets uniformly poor results. In all of the declared majors highlighted above as being below 75% outcome mastery, identical majors on alternative tracks (e.g. CSUGE vs. IGETC) show much higher mastery rates. Moreover, there is no consistency as to whether declared majors on a CSUGE track or IGETC track are showing the lower mastery levels. There is no clear takeaway here, but the results should be watched.

This request supports EMP Objective 2.7 and EMP Goal 3 in its entirety; a successful WRC is key to supporting the English discipline's efforts to support students successfully completing ENG-1A and to closing equity gaps for disproportionately impacted populations. A successful WRC also supports our program goals of improving ENG 1A success rates and improving the effectiveness of the Writing and Reading Center. IWCA fosters the development of writing center directors, tutors, and staff by sponsoring events, publications, and other professional activities; by encouraging scholarship connected to writing center-related fields; and by providing an international forum for writing center concerns. A membership would enable the WRC Lead Instructor to apply for grants, keep up with current best practices of writing center coordination and leadership, and attend conferences.

Staffing of Writing and Reading Center by faculty

Resource Year

2024 - 2027

What resources do we already have?

At present, faculty staffing of the Writing and Reading Center by faculty other than the WRC Lead Instructor is supported by redirecting a portion of ENG-1A and -1B lab hours.

Please summarize how this request supports one or more EMP Goals, Equity goals, your program plans or goals, and/or is supported by outcomes assessment data.

Stabilizing and increasing faculty presence in the WRC is vital to EMP Goal 2.7, EMP Goal 3, and our program goal to increase WRC resources. Regulations require a faculty member to be present for the WRC to remain open. Our WRC Lead Instructor receives only a .2 reassign, meaning that she alone cannot staff the WRC for anywhere close the 40 hours per week the discipline would like to achieve. This means the WRC is reliant on other faculty staffing the WRC, a process that is currently funded through the redirection of some lab hours. For the WRC to be fully available to students and support them in successful completion of writing-focused academic exercises (a goal of obvious importance to successful completion of ENG-1A, which is part of EMP 2.7), the WRC needs more stable funding to support this faculty presence.

Tutors are an essential part of effectively supporting student success. Unfortunately, tutor salaries are currently covered primarily through soft monies, a funding source that is irregular and unreliable. More stable and fully institutionalized tutor funding would support EMP goals 2.1, 2.7, and all of EMP goal 3. It also supports our program plan/goal to increase tutor support for the WRC.

Program Review Reflections

What would make program review meaningful and relevant for your unit?

One of the major elements of Program Review for English is the opportunity to examine our success and retention data. This cycle revealed a significant gap between those figures and, more importantly, a success rate in ENG-1A, a course essential to transfer and graduation, of around 50%.

What would make program review more meaningful and relevant would be support in doing research to identify the reasons behind this gap. While faculty can certainly propose potential answers, each individual faculty member's contributions are limited by their experiences and the students they see. We as a discipline do not have access to any comprehensive research as to reasons that contribute to our lower success rates. We also lack easy access to those students who could best answer our questions, i.e. those students who failed our classes. Support for research in this area would be of significant help.

What questions do we need to ask to understand your program plans, goals, needs?

A key question to ask for English is how success in English courses, and in particular ENG-1A, impacts the goals of other disciplines and the college as a whole. While all disciplines at Norco support each other, I do not think it is much of a stretch to claim that when students are given support for their writing, that directly impacts their success in almost all their other courses. So, as the Committee reviews our program review requests, I would encourage committee members to think about the impact of English elsewhere.

I also would encourage the committee members and other reviewers to ask questions about English's connection to Equity. Most students will take a Math and English class during their academic career, meaning that the English discipline often is at the forefront of establishing an equity-focused classroom experience for students. Committee members might ask how English supports equity. The discipline would also appreciate feedback on English could continue to support equity efforts at our college.

What types of data do you need to support your program plans, goals, needs?

As mentioned above, English could strongly benefit from data that explores reasons why students fail ENG-1A.

If there are any supporting documents you would like to attach, please attach them here.

Course Description

Prerequisite: ENG-1A or ENG-1AHCourse Credit Recommendation: Degree Credit

Studies in fundamental principles and practice of writing fiction, poetry, and nonfiction. Lectures and discussions emphasize analysis of professional examples of creative writing drawn from multiple historical and cultural traditions as well as the study of creative writing theory. In-class workshops provide practice in creative writing techniques. In-class and out-of-class class writing assignments provide practice in writing techniques and in peer- and self-analysis.

Entrance Skills:

Before entering the course, students should be able to demonstrate the following skills:

1. Write an inquiry-driven research essay on a culturally relevant issue while engaging with text-based sources.
 - ENG-1A - Write an inquiry-driven, analytical, or argument-based research essay on a culturally relevant issue that demonstrates critical reading and analysis of text-based sources.
 - ENG-1AH - Write an inquiry-driven, analytical, or argument-based research essay on a culturally relevant issue that demonstrates critical reading and analysis of text-based sources.
2. Write texts using diverse rhetorical or multimodal strategies.
 - ENG-1A - Write texts using diverse rhetorical or multimodal strategies.
 - ENG-1AH - Write texts using diverse rhetorical or multimodal strategies.

Course Objectives:

Upon successful completion of the course, students should be able to demonstrate the following activities:

1. Identify and explain the elements of creative writing in poetry, short fiction, and nonfiction drawn from multiple historical and cultural traditions.
2. Recognize and explain the processes of creative writing in poetry, short fiction, and nonfiction.
3. Support interpretations, analyses, and arguments regarding selected examples of poetry, short fiction, and nonfiction, informed by understanding the elements of creative writing and creative writing theory
4. Apply, analyze, and synthesize elements of poetry, short fiction, and nonfiction writing in the context of original creative writing assignments
5. Assess and advise peers on works in progress based on an understanding of the elements and processes of creative writing and the application of creative writing theory
6. Apply the elements of creative writing and creative writing theory to their own creative writing process to develop original work

Student Learning Outcomes:

Upon successful completion of the course, students should be able to demonstrate the following skills:

1. Generate and revise original creative works which use techniques from a diversity of voices and a wide range of experience, especially historically underrepresented poets and writers.
 - Communication Skills
2. Read and respond critically and constructively to published writers, ongoing work from classmates, and their own work and writing process, informed by an understanding of creative writing theory and practice
 - Critical Thinking

Methods of Instruction:

Methods of instruction used to achieve student learning outcomes may include, but are not limited to, the following activities:

- Presentation of lectures and discussions concerning writing techniques, themes, and elements of selected poems and prose forms (fiction and nonfiction) in order for students to understand processes of creative writing composition;
- Guest writers/lecturers invited to class to discuss writing techniques and critique elements of selected texts;
- Use of films, videos, slides, distributing handouts, and/or electronic or computer-based media in order to reinforce understanding of the elements and process of creative writing;
- Cooperative/collaborative learning tasks designed to assist students in applying the elements of creative writing to original poetry, fiction, and nonfiction by means of peer and instructor feedback on works in progress;
- Individual conferences in order to evaluate and advise students on original writing projects;

- Computer-assisted instruction which encourages the process and revision of original creative writing projects;
 - A mixture of practice opportunities--individual, peer-to-peer, small groups, and whole class workshops--as deemed appropriate.

Methods of Evaluation:

Students will be evaluated for progress in and/or mastery of student learning outcomes using methods of evaluation which may include, but are not limited to, the following activities:

- Methods of evaluation must include a student's original creative work; other methods listed below may or may not be included by the instructor, but original creative writing that addresses the SLOs and Objectives is a required method of evaluation;
 - Individual and group creative writing assignments designed to demonstrate successful understanding and application of the elements of poetry, fiction, and nonfiction writing;
 - Self-evaluation and peer evaluation assignments designed to demonstrate successful understanding and application of revision strategies for poetry, fiction, and nonfiction writing;
 - Written analyses and critiques of selected literary examples designed to reinforce student awareness of the elements and processes of creative writing across genres;
 - Questions on reading assignments designed to evaluate students' understanding of the key theories of creative writing;
 - Quizzes/examinations designed to assess students' ability to critically analyze and apply creative writing theory to selected short fiction, nonfiction, and poetry;
 - Participation in workshops to examine work-in-progress with peer writers as literary colleagues;
 - Final examination to assess students' mastery of the key theories of creative writing.

Sample Assignments:

Outside-of-Class Reading Assignments

- Read and analyze selected texts across genres, demonstrating awareness of the elements of fiction and poetry.
- Read and compare poetry examining differences among formal structures, free verse, and experimental structures.
- Read and analyze short fiction to identify storytelling techniques.
- Read selections of short fiction and nonfiction by contemporary authors from various literary and cultural traditions.

Outside-of-Class Writing Assignments

- Compose original poems and short works of fiction and nonfiction, applying understanding of various genre strategies and approaches.
- Compose formal written critiques of peer drafts in progress.
- Compose multiple versions of written exercises in various genres in order to experiment with structure, point of view, and voice in poetry and storytelling.

Other Outside-of-Class Assignments

- Revise, edit, and format original works of poetry, short fiction, and nonfiction based on instructor and peer comments.
 - Prepare written questions related to literary readings and speakers on campus.

ENG-8 : Introduction to Mythology

College: NOR
Lecture Hours: 54.000
Outside-of-Class Hours: 108.000
Total Student Learning Hours: 162.000
Units: 3.00
Grading Methods: Letter Grade

Course Description

Prerequisite: Eligibility for college-level composition or qualifying placement for ENG 1A

Advisory: ENG-1B or ENG-1BH

Course Credit Recommendation: Degree Credit

Analyzes myths from various time periods, geographic locations, and cultural settings. Emphasizes the historical sources and cultural functions of myths and legends in ancient societies and their continuing relevance to modern thought and culture.

Entrance Skills:

Before entering the course, students should be able to demonstrate the following skills:

1. Prerequisite Entry Skill: Construct unified, organized, primarily text-based essays, largely free of disruptive errors, which employ various rhetorical strategies, perspectives, and concrete evidence in support of arguable thesis statements.
2. Prerequisite Entry Skill: Employ MLA conventions for documenting sources and citing parenthetically.
3. Advisory Entry Skill: Critically discuss and interpret primary texts, recognizing key ideas and responding in both oral and written form.
 - ENG-1B - Analyze diverse literary texts through various social, historical, cultural, psychological, or aesthetic contexts.
 - ENG-1BH - Analyze diverse literary texts through various social, historical, cultural, psychological, or aesthetic contexts.
4. Advisory Entry Skill: Analyze, synthesize, and evaluate primary texts using college level critical thinking skills.
 - ENG-1B - Analyze diverse literary texts through various social, historical, cultural, psychological, or aesthetic contexts.
 - ENG-1BH - Analyze diverse literary texts through various social, historical, cultural, psychological, or aesthetic contexts.
5. Advisory Entry Skill: Compose well-developed, unified, stylistically competent writing assignments.
 - ENG-1B - Develop written arguments in response to diverse literary texts.
 - ENG-1BH - Develop written arguments in response to diverse literary texts.

Course Objectives:

Upon successful completion of the course, students should be able to demonstrate the following activities:

1. Identify distinctive features of mythology across a variety of cultural, historical, and discursive contexts

2. Analyze and interpret myths from different cultures and time periods, comparing them to one another and relating them to theories of the origins and cultural functions of myth, both historically and in contemporary settings where the myths are part of a living tradition.
3. Analyze and interpret features distinctive of the various mythical traditions or that mark them as characteristic of or unique to the culture/ time from which they emerge and in which they may still function.
4. Evaluate the relevance to and continuity of myths within modern thought, culture, and literature with an awareness of how differences of culture, race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, and other social markers and positionality may shape how we read, interpret, and re-interpret myth.
5. Employ methods of critical literary analysis to read and interpret myths.
6. Demonstrate comprehension of the above through class discussion, written exams, and essays using appropriate citation form.

Student Learning Outcomes:

Upon successful completion of the course, students should be able to demonstrate the following skills:

1. Communicate analytical arguments about and comprehension of course content, which shall include a diverse selection of mythic traditions from around the world representing the stories of a broad range of cultural traditions, through essays and other methods of analytical expression.
 - o Critical Thinking
 - o Communication Skills

Methods of Instruction:

Methods of instruction used to achieve student learning outcomes may include, but are not limited to, the following activities:

Note: The following methods of instruction are driven by culturally responsive and sustaining and antiracist pedagogues:

- No-stakes, collaborative reading and writing activities and projects (e.g., speed dating, poster sessions and gallery walks, jigsaw, Save the Last Word, writing groups, literature circles, collaborative writing)
- Creation of pair and small group activities for discussions, debates, research projects, and group presentations in order to have students develop and apply critical thinking, active listening, and literary analysis skills.
- Guided reading activities, following CAP's instructional cycle (e.g., pre-reading and post-reading assignments focused first on comprehension and then analysis)
- Student-centered instruction: mini-lessons (5-10 minutes)
- Seminar style instruction that solicits active student participation in discussion, debate, and presentations. Student participation should advance critical thinking and literary analysis skills, promote awareness of the distinctive features of various mythic traditions and of broader cross cultural themes and ideas within myth, and examine the connection of myth to the students' own lives and culture.
- Classroom lectures, presentations, and activities that demonstrate and offer practice in the application of critical reading and research skills to specific myths/ mythic traditions.
- Classroom lectures, presentations, and activities that provide students with background information on myth and the various myth types and mythic traditions and the appropriate historic/geographic/ cultural contexts.
- Modeling reading and writing skills and strategies via instructor or student samples
- Assignment of low-stakes exercises, quizzes, and in-class writing designed to facilitate the acquisition of the college-level reading, composition, and literary analysis skills covered by the class.
- Screening of videos/films/slides to help broaden students' understanding of cultural contexts or specific myths/ mythic traditions.
- Invitation of guest lecturers to bring alternative points of view into the classroom about myth.

Methods of instruction outside the classroom may include, but are not limited to:

- Assignment of primary texts that are complex enough to facilitate the development of critical thinking and reading skills. Instructors will assign texts that expose students to a diverse selection of myths taken from a broad range of mythic traditions from across the globe and readings on theories of myth/ cultural functions of myth.
- Assignment of interpretive and argumentative essays and other written work designed to clarify students' arguments about myth and synthesize the topics of the class.
- Assignment of secondary criticism that supports the understanding of the primary texts and models the literary and cultural analysis skills being covered in the class.
- Assignment of research projects that encourage students to further knowledge about myths, the mythic tradition from which they emerge, content, or interpretation.

- Development and assignment of online and computer assisted instructional activities, such as web quests, Internet presentations, discussion board postings, online paper submissions, and online research designed to develop research skills, experience the breadth of material and criticism found on the Internet, and practice making connections between the myths, their own lives, and contemporary culture.
- Individual conferences to help students identify and develop strategies for improving their thinking, reading, and writing skills.

Methods of Evaluation:

Students will be evaluated for progress in and/or mastery of student learning outcomes using methods of evaluation which may include, but are not limited to, the following activities:

Methods of evaluation must include formal academic essay writing. Other methods listed below may or may not be included by an instructor, but formal academic essay writing is a required method of evaluation.

- Formal essays will be designed to facilitate a comparative understanding of myth/ myth types as well as deeper understanding of individual works and the contexts out of which they emerge; essays will incorporate literary analysis techniques, as well as critical thinking and writing skills.
- Class participation including oral reports, presentations, performances, debates, discussions designed to evaluate students' critical thinking and literary analysis skills and to measure the students' ability to explain how myths can be interpreted and analyzed in the context of its tradition.
- Written reports/presentations designed to demonstrate critical thinking and writing skills through the process of constructing written observations/ reactions/ reports/ presentations/ explications of myth.
- Additional assignments that supplement traditional essays by analyzing literature and making an interpretive claim through multiple modalities including visual and creative mixed-media, supported by short expository essays.
- Quizzes, in-class writing, and examinations to measure students' recognition of distinctive features of specific myth types and/ or mythic traditions and their ability to employ techniques of literary analysis to interpret myth.
- Class and individual projects designed to illustrate students' ability to recognize the distinctive features of myth types and traditions, to demonstrate a comparative understanding of myth/ myth types as well as deeper understanding of individual works and the contexts out of which they emerge.
- Final examination designed to synthesize the topics of the class, measure students' comprehension of the material, and demonstrate achievement of student learning outcomes.
- Methods of evaluation designed to assess literary analysis skills should require students to read works closely, recognizing subtle and complex differences in language use, understand figurative language, distinguish between literal and metaphorical meanings, employ the basic language and terminology of literary analysis, provide valid logical premises in support of an interpretation, analysis of, or argument about myth, and support premises with effectively integrated, relevant, thoughtful, and sufficient evidence drawn from myths.

Sample Assignments:

Outside-of-Class Reading Assignments

- Significant works of Greco-Roman mythology, and at least four other mythological traditions, three of which should be non-European; Instructors must assign works from a minimum of five of the traditions outlined in the course content. Works can be from individual texts or appropriately themed anthologies.
- Read the excerpts from the Theogony and Popol Vuh as well as Out of the Blue and Genesis Chpts. 1 and 2. As you read, consider what type of creation myth is at work here and the differences in the relationships between humanity and divinity and humanity and the natural world that the myths each seem to establish.

Outside-of-Class Writing Assignments

Writing assignments should be designed to demonstrate students' ability to employ college-level methods of literary analyses to interpret mythology with an awareness of historical sources, discuss the cultural functions of myths and legends in ancient society and their continuing relevance to modern thought and culture, and demonstrate critical thinking and writing skills. These can be assigned as in-class or take-home essays, and may include formal literary analysis essays, short answer literary analysis responses, and/or short answer study guide responses.

- For short response paper:

- What is a major difference you saw in Out of the Blue and the other creation myths we've read so far? Explain and what do you think this tells us about how creation myths are expressions of the nature of the world and our place in it for a given culture? OR
- What are the differences in the roles the animals play in the myths we read this week? OR
- Contrast the explanation of the creation of humans in any two myths that have described the creation of humans so far.
- Three formal essay prompts:
 - Analyze the ways in which some of the myths/ texts we've read blame women for men's woes (Ex. Shamhat, Pandora, and Eve--pick one or two and if two, compare), what in the context of the myth itself helps to explain this, the influence this has had on views of women moving forward. Can these myths be re-interpreted in ways that are less misogynistic? How? Why? How should we view these myths today? OR
 - What is the role of women in The Odyssey? Focusing especially on Penelope, Calypso, the maids, Anticleia (you may also want to consider Athena) discuss how women are portrayed in this epic. OR
 - Apply (and analyze/ critique) Joseph Campbell's mono-myth to the story of a mythic hero/ heroine (use one of the ones we read—Mwindo, Atalanta, Gilgamesh, Odysseus, Maui, for example). Does the mono-myth outline work as well for non-western as for western heroes? In what ways does the mono-myth outline work or fall short in terms of thinking about powerful mythic women and their stories? Ultimately in your assessment what are the strengths and limitations of Campbell's mono-myth?

Other Outside-of-Class Assignments

- None required.

Outside-of-Class Reading Assignments

Primary works of British literature from the eighth century CE to 1800, including poetry, drama, and fiction. Works can be from individual texts or appropriately themed anthologies but should be mostly full-length works with only a few excerpts.

- For this week read Acts 1-3 of the Tempest (we'll finish with Acts 4 and 5 next week). Side by side with your reading, listen to/ read the following: Folger Library Podcast - The Tempest in the Caribbean. We'll work with critical lenses, in particular post-colonial approaches to literature from the early modern period, as we work with this play.
- For this week, read the excerpt in the text from Equiano, from The Interesting Narrative of the Life of Olaudah Equiano. Alongside this, read Johnson "A Brief to Free a Slave"; Locke "Of Slavery". We'll be looking at how Equiano's narrative establishes..... and challenges..... something like this if we want to add an explanation.
- Pick a short exchange from Twelfth Night in which gender non-conformity is a means of power. What does this passage tell us about the way in which the characters construct gender and from that, their understanding of their roles in their world? Be ready to discuss and explain why it is significant to our understanding of how gender/otherness works in this play.

Outside-of-Class Writing Assignments

Writing assignments should be designed to demonstrate students' ability to employ college-level methods of literary analysis to interpret British literature of this period and some of its cultural, intellectual, and artistic trends, and demonstrate critical thinking and writing skills. These can be assigned as in-class or take-home essays, and may include short answer literary analysis responses, and/or short answer study guide responses. Formal academic essays are a required method of evaluation.

- Queer criticism operates with the premise that "categories of sexuality cannot be defined by such simple oppositions as homosexual/heterosexual" (Tyson 337). For this prompt you will want to review the handout and resources on queer criticism and also review any introductory material in the Norton that refers to gender roles, sexuality, marriage, couplings, performance, etc.
- Perform a queer reading of Twelfth Night in order to respond to at least one of the questions below:
- To what extent does the play subvert our conceptions of heterosexual/homosexual identities? How are the relationships in the play pointing out or highlighting these nuances between the two identity categories?
- Explore the ways by which the play demonstrates a "queer coding," addressing the ways that the play is apparently heterosexual but should not be read as such.
- What does the play reveal about the operations (socially, politically, psychologically) of heterosexism? Is the play (consciously or unconsciously homophobic and does it critique, celebrate, or blindly accept heterosexist values?

- Using at least one premise from our feminism handout, compare 2 female authors during the 18th century and how their texts challenged/progressed/expanded/subverted/or upheld the status quo for women in 18th century British Society.
- Questions for Thought:
- How has the role and concept of marriage changed over the years? How are your authors responding to this idea?
- In what ways are women writers entering the public realm and how successfully?
- To what extent do female writers code their texts to discuss political and economic issues?
- How do female writers define power and through what means do they obtain this power in their literary writings?
- Some critics have argued that Chaucer's Wife of Bath critiques Medieval antifeminism while others have argued that she fulfills the stereotypes of women put forward by the Medieval antifeminists. Define Medieval antifeminism and take a stance on whether you interpret Chaucer as intending the Wife of Bath to be a critique of such stereotypes or a fulfillment of them.
- For a short answer response: Is there a real "proposal" about the Irish problem buried in the patently brutal and absurd proposal Swift's narrator offers in "A Modest Proposal"? What is it? What is Swift's actual attitude toward the Irish problem?

Other Outside-of-Class Assignments

- In an oral presentation, research the period and themes associated with your chosen Medieval, Early Modern, or 18th century author/text for the semester. Create a multi-media presentation using Google Sites, YouTube, PowerPoint, WordPress, or Prezi to present your research. During a class session be ready to give a 10-minute presentation of your research. Then offer a short interpretation of one passage from your author's text exemplifying the points you made in your research. Create 1 discussion question for the class and facilitate the discussion for 5 minutes. responding to students' questions and offering further points or responses or resources. Your presentation should follow MLA guidelines and include a Works Cited entry.
- Students can plan and conduct group or individual presentations on British authors, themes, and cultural, intellectual, and sociohistorical trends from the Medieval period through the 18th century using online presentation platforms Prezi, PowerPoint, Google Docs, Google Sites, YouTube, TikTok, or Instagram stories.
- Students can create a blog or media reel on which to post their reflections on readings in British Literature using Google Docs, Google Sites, or any online blog program, such as Word Press or Square Space, and/or social media platforms like TikTok and Instagram.

Tutor Recommendation Form

The survey will take approximately 4 minutes to complete. This form is to be filled out by the Instructor of Record that taught the course that the candidate is being recommended to tutor. Submission of this form does not guarantee job placement. Tutoring positions are offered based on the interview process, faculty recommendation, departmental need, and availability of funds. *If the Instructor of Record is no longer available, the department chair or dean may fill out this form in their absence.

Hi, Daren. When you submit this form, the owner will see your name and email address.

* Required

1. Please select one *

- I am the Instructor of Record for the course that the candidate is being recommended to tutor.
- I am the department chair for the discipline of the course that the candidate is being recommended to tutor.
- I am the dean for the discipline of the course that the candidate is being recommended to tutor.
