Will we get another IRS stimulus check? What we hear about a proposed second round

FEMA, Coronavirus (COVID-19) Pandemic: Alternate Care Site (ACS) “Warm Sites” (May 12, 2020 Fact Sheet)

- To address immediate and projected needs from the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, state, local, tribal, and territorial (SLTT) governments may, under certain conditions, be reimbursed through FEMA’s Public Assistance (PA) Program for costs associated with keeping Alternate Care Sites (ACS), including temporary and expanded medical facilities, minimally operational when COVID-19 cases diminish and the facilities are no longer in use.

Supreme Court strikes down state's stay-at-home order

- The Wisconsin Supreme Court has overturned the state's stay-at-home order, ruling it "unlawful" and "unenforceable" in a high-profile win for the state's Republican-led Legislature.
- In a 4-3 decision Wednesday, the court ruled that Democratic Gov. Tony Evers' administration overstepped its authority when the state Department of Health Services extended the order to May 26.
- The suit was filed specifically against state Department of Health Services Secretary-designee Andrea Palm and other health officials, who made the decision in mid-April to extend the state's "Safer at Home" emergency order. At the same time as the extension, the state loosened some restrictions on certain businesses, including golf courses, public libraries, and arts and crafts stores.

Racist ‘Zoombombs’ Disrupt University’s Virtual Graduation

- Oklahoma City University’s virtual commencement ceremony replaced the in-person event, which was cancelled due to COVID-19. Was held last Saturday was hijacked by hackers who disrupted the event with racial slurs and a swastika.
- The online event was intended to give the school’s approximately 650 graduates some semblance of the pomp and circumstance they missed because the in-person commencement ceremony was cancelled due to the coronavirus crisis, reports WCSJ.

Cal State System Cancels In-Person Classes for Fall 2020 Semester

- The states' other two systems, the University of California and the California Community Colleges, are likely to follow suit.
- The California State University (CSU) system announced its plans to cancel all in-person classes and continue online instruction through at least the Fall 2020 semester due to coronavirus.
- CSU Chancellor Timothy White made the announcement Tuesday. The decision is the first of its kind in the U.S. and will apply to all 23 system universities.
- "This approach to virtual planning is necessary for many reasons. First and foremost is the health, safety and welfare of our students, faculty and staff, and the evolving data surrounding the progression of COVID-19 – current and as forecast throughout the 2020-21 academic year," White wrote in a statement. "This planning approach is necessary because a course that might begin in a face-to-face modality would likely have to be switched to a virtual format during the term if a serious second wave of the pandemic occurs, as forecast."

Community colleges could see influx of athletes as coronavirus disrupts sports recruiting

- In March, the California Community College Athletic Association announced it was cancelling all spring sports, mirroring a similar decision by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which oversees university sports. The abrupt cancellation dashed the hopes of an estimated 9,500 student athletes who'd flocked to California's well-known community college sport league — some paying up to $10,000 a year in out-of-state tuition in a quest to be noticed by recruiters from top Division 1 teams.

California community colleges sue U.S. for denying COVID-19 funds to undocumented students, others

- The nation's largest community college system is suing the federal government for denying coronavirus relief funds to more than a half-million California students, including DACA recipients and many of those from low-income families.
- At the California Community Colleges, more than 500,000 of the 1.5 million students enrolled in the spring semester are ineligible because they fall into one of those categories, including about 70,000 undocumented students, the chancellor's office said. Another 275,000 are likely ineligible because they never filled out an application for federal financial aid. Many low-income students at California community colleges don't fill out the application because they receive a tuition fee waiver through the state.

Temecula Works Toward Reopening As Possible 'Subregion'

- While the city of Temecula hopes Gov. Gavin Newsom will grant Riverside County a green light to reopen its economy on a fast track under his "regional variance" program, local officials aren't standing idle despite state and county restrictions.
- Instead of defying orders, the city is looking for opportunities to back the county's efforts and possibly reopen Temecula as a "subregion." On Tuesday, Temecula City Council members unanimously approved a 39-page "Community Recovery and Reopening Plan" that provides local businesses and organizations with guidance on reopening amid coronavirus. The outlined plan aligns with state and county orders, and is a living document that can be updated based on changes and community feedback.

Forecast Discussion

Showers ended overnight and deserts winds continue but have decreased. Temperatures will be below average for inland areas (near normal on coast). Much warmer for Friday into the weekend ahead of a storm system moving into northern California. Temperatures warm to 5 to 10 degrees above average for most areas and the marine layer mixed out. An unseasonably strong Pacific system is expected early next week for cooler conditions, wind and a chance of showers. The wind will be strongest in the deserts and mountain slopes on Monday and Tuesday.
